"I've had professional connection with those people likely to know if such a conspiracy existed," he said. "Whereas the Nationalist element of American citizens of Irish birth have not gone back upon their views of Irish nationality, yet there is no such thing as a dynamite conspiracy of any kind or character, nor has there been any in existence for many years. It may be said by our enemies that it exists in either Chicago or New York, but the Nationalists here are in such close touch with those of Chicago or New York that it is utterly impossible that such a conspiracy could exist in either of these cities, or any part of the United States, without it coming to the knowledge of the people here.

or any part of the United States, without it coming to the knowledge of the people here.

"It is evidently a scheme of some branch of the British Government to save the name of England from the atrocities practiced upon the Irish Fenian prisoners. Such men as Dr. Gallagher and John Daly, and others of that stamp, were all men of culture, and everything has been done in the English prisons to brutalize them and drive them mad. The English have driven them insane, but were unable to brutalize them.

"I look forward with a good deal of interest to the expose on this subject, certain to be made by means of the Parliamentary inquiry in the House of Commons, which Mr. Balfour has been compelled to grant as to the treatment of Irish prisoners in English prisons.

With this petition uppermost in their minds the story of an alleged dynamite plot, coupled with the arrest of men who have been in the background for years, appeared absolutely incredible. On one point they agreed, and that was that the whole sensation was part of a well-conceived scheme to manufacture public opinion in such a way as will lead to the justification of the barbarous "Tynan was openly a resident of New York. He was to be seen day after day on Broadway for many years, and it was well known to British detectives, who followed him constantly. "The Irish people, as I know them," declared Thomas Desmond, the well-known Irish nationalist, "would not be crazy enough to take any action while those poor fellows are in jail and begging the English Government to release them. A great many Irish nationalists are under the impression that he had nothing to do with the Phoenix Park murders. My honest conviction is he never had any connection with them. There are some prominent Irishmen in San Francisco who knew P. J. Tynan quite intimately, and they are more especially astonished at his arrest. His brother, John T. J. E. Moore, for years a special police-man employed at the Baldwin Hotel, committed suicide at 7:20 o'clock last evening by plunging into the bay from the deck of the ferry-boat Bay City.

Moore boarded the steamer at the narrow gauge mole on the Oakland side at 7 o'clock. He was apperantly sober, and behaved in a rational manner. After strolling about the vessel for a few moments, he walked inside the cabin and took a seat.

When the boat was opposite Goat Island Moore rose from his seat, rushed to the rail, threw his hat on the deck and shouting, "I have taken my last drink of whisky," sprang overboard.

Captain John Leale, who witnessed the act, immediately signaled the engines to stop the steamer, and promptly ordered a boat to be lowered. After a short search Moore's body was found floating in the wake of the steamer.

The body was taken into the boat and thence hoisted aboard the steamer. Here it was rolled over a barrel, and a physician, who chanced to be aboard, was summoned, but when he came upon the scene the last spark of life had departed.

On arriving at this side Captain Leale notified the Coroner, and the body was removed to the Morgue. Here it was noticed that the man's ear was split, and it was first supposed that death was the result of a fracture of the skull, but an investigation showed that it was undoubtedly due to drowning.

In the hat that Moore threw upon the deck was found a letter addressed to the deceased, at 187 Hyde street. The superscription was written in bold characters, apparently the handwriting of a man.

Inquiry at 187 Hyde street elicited the information that J. Moore was a special officer employed at the Baldwin Hotel for the past ten years, but who was discharged a few months ago. He had been recently employed at the New Louvre. He had been drinking heavily for some time past and often expressed his intention of committing suicide.

Sad Plight in Which Young Francisco Fernandez Was Discovered.

The Lad's Body Bears Marks of Violence Inflicted, He Says, by His Mother.

Officer W. T. Hooper of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals observed a little boy eating some refuse from a barrel in front of a fruit cannery, on Francisco street, yesterday, as though famished with hunger. Mr. Hooperasked him what he was doing there and why he was eating such disgusting food.

The lad, in answer, told a most pitiful story. His name, he said, was Francisco Fernandez, and until ten days ago he had been living with his mother at 4 Gerke alley. According to the boy's statement, his mother has been extremely cruel, beating him with coal-scuttles, brooms, tea-kettles, hot pokers and other instruments of torture whenever she took the notion, which, he says, was pretty often.

BORAX BEDS OF INYO.

One Hundred Acres of Vats Going-Lively Politics and Need of a Railroad

Among the arrivals at the Lick House is W. M. Richards of Inyo County, who has been agent for the Carson and Colorado Railroad for over seven years at Keeler and Independence. He has resigned to engage in mining in Nevada County, where his father, Captain Henry Richards, has been prominently connected with the mines for nearly forty years.

Jndge H. L. Lorenz, the special Commissioner appointed by the Department at Washington to investigate the claims of the letter-carriers for overtime, began his work yester day. Through the courtesy of Judge McKenna a room adjoining the latter's chamber has been secured for the purpose of con ducting the necessary inquiry into the merits of each case. The demands will be taken up by stations, the alphabetical order being followed as closely as practicable. The claims of carriers attached to station F will be the first investigated. There is something like $200,000 to be distributed among 300 men, the largest single claim reaching $2000. The majority run from $500 to $1400. Clark McKerchen, representing Charles, William B. and George A. King, the Washington attorneys for the carriers, is assisting Major Lorenz in his work. He is an enthusiastic bicyclist, and intends making a tour of the mining counties of the State on his electric bicycle this month.

Mr. Richards says Inyo County needs

Valley Railroad Company ever extends from Bakersfield through Walkers Pass it will benefit Inyo County greatly, and will have only a gap of sixty miles between the two railroads.

"Inyo County is the third largest county in the State, its area being 10,156 square miles. There are 1014 voters registered in Inyo County this. year. They need protection for their wool and soda, and the question is, How can they get it? Freight charges are high to Inyo County points from San Francisco and Sacramento, ranging from 2½ to 2½ cents per pound."

He says that the production of soda from the beds of Inyo amounts to 3000 tons a year. Over 100 acres of vats are now in use. The plant is being extended every year. The crude soda is shipped to San Francisco and Alameda to Smith's borax works, and the price ranges from $22 to $30 a ton. A. J. Laws, the superintendent of the Inyo Development Company, which is operating the beds, has twelve white men and thirty Chinese at work.

ILLEGAL FISHING. Six Men Arrested for Using Small Mesh

Deputy Fish Commissioners John H. and W. J. Davis, now patrolling the upper bay in the launch Hustler, made two important arrests early yesterday morning.
They made a run along Suisun Bay, and below Roe Island found two men fishing for bass with small mesh nets. The depution ties started for Suisun with their prisoners, and a few miles further down the bay they captured four more fishermen engaged in the same illegal business, and when captured had caught a number of striped bass in their small mesn nets.

The six prisoners were taken to the town of Suisun, and not being able to secure $250 bail each went to jail.

Millionaire Campbell Says He Did Not Go to Meet Any Girl.

The Winthrop Trial Almost Over. Assumed Names by Which the Prisoner Was Known.

The trial of Oliver W. Winthrop is fast drawing to a close. Yesterday the last testimony of the defense was introduced and the prosecution's evidence in rebuttal was commenced. To-day or to-morrow the arguments of counsel will probably be heard and then the fate of the prisoner will be in the hands of the jury.

Yesterday after John Forbel, James W. Burling, J. M. Custer and Adolph Meyer had told what they know of Winthrop's character and general reputation, which all agreed was good up to the time of the Matthews episode, the prosecution began the introduction of evidence in rebuttal.

A. M. Pierson, assistant superintendent of Laurel Hill Cemetery, was called, and asked whether E. J. M. Stanley owned a lot there. Attorney Bell objected to the question and a wrangle ensued, but Bell lot there. Attorney Bell objected to the question and a wrangle ensued, but Bell subsequently withdrew the objection. Pierson replied that the books do not show that E. J. M. Stanley owns a lot, but that one S. L. Stanley has a plat. Cecil Brown, who has been Mr. Campbell's business agent for some time, said that for a number of years his employer did not carry a purse, but that recently ne has done so. He identified the purse found on Winthrop as being in every respect like the one Campbell has carried. Mrs. Abbott Campbell, wife of the prosecuting witness, also said the purse is exactly like her husband's.

James Campbell himself was then recalled. He denied in toto Winthrop's story about the veiled woman at 4109 California street, and said that Winthrop never rang the bell but opened the door with a key which he carried. Campbell also denied making any arrangement with Winthrop, or any one else, to rent the California-street cottage for him.

"Did you arrange for that house to meet a woman there?" asked Judge Wallace.

"I did not," replied the witness.

Mrs. Dunton, from whom the cottage was rented, denied Winthrop's story that Urquhart rented the cottage. She said she never saw Urquhart until she gazed on him in the courtroom. She positively identified Winthrop as the man to whom she let her house.

"How is it you are better able to iden-

Attorney Bell earlier in the day made a determined attempt to impeach the testimony of D. A. Urquhart. He tried to prove that the witness had been convicted of a felony. On Saturday afternoon a record of an arrest and two years' imprisonment in a Canadian prison was introduced, but Urquhart denied having ever been in Canada. He, however, admitted having been twice arrested on charges of felony, on which he had not charges of felony, on which he had not been convicted.

District Attorney Barnes then went into Winthrop's army record. S. R. Taylor, a United States quartermaster, told of how he enlisted in Company B of the Tenth Infantry in 1870. He said he then met Winthrop, whom he knew as Standinger, and served several years with him. He said that it was after re-enlisting that the prisoner took the name of Winthrop. Calkins was another name which Taylor said Winthrop bore atone time. An incident concerning a missing coat, which was found in Winthrop's possession, was also retailed, but was objected to and not admitted in evidence. On cross-examination Taylor said that in 1870 Winthrop's age was about 19, and that he did not know him by that name until 1878, when they met at Whipple barracks in Arizona. Afterward they met in this City in 1886.
